SUMMARY

I am a child of refugees who sought asylum in America after fleeing their war-torn country of Bosnia and Herzegovina. As a reflection of my parents, my goal has always been to lead and take initiative for my desires. What drew me into coding was my devotion to knowing how and why technology works. Accompanied with that, my draw to coding resided with the narrative that coding is not collaborative nor communicative. I desire to be the outlier in the coding world where communication is just as important as creating the programs. As a developer, my long-term goal is to create applications that unite and inform people that they are all capable of learning how to code.
